INTERESTING INCIDENT.—Miss Sallie Brock, of Virginia, who is now on a visit to Rome, is furnishing a series of interesting letters from the Eternal City to the New York Metropolitan Record. From her last letter, dated February 15th, we make the following interesting extract, which will be read with pleasure by every admirer of that great and good man Stonewall Jackson. After describing her visit to the church of St. Maria di Ara Coeli, Miss Brock writes as follows:

From the church I continued my walk towards the palace of Caesar, and as I stood attempting to read an inscription on the arch of Septimius Severus an incident occurred which I think well worth relating—at least that sent me onward with a feeling of pride in my heart which must have been akin to that which many a Roman woman has experienced. I mention of certain names that give a brighter glory to Rome.

Wishing some information, I ventured a question to a friendly priest who passed me.
At that moment a French soldier, in the uniform of the Pontifical Zouaves, approached, and politely lifted his hat. When the priest had given me an answer, he said:

"Are you not an American lady?"

"I am," I replied.

"Are you not from the States of the South?"

I proudly confessed my nativity in Virginia, and a gratified smile lighted up his sunburnt visage.

"I thought so! I thought so!" he exclaimed.
"I cannot mistake the accent. I was a soldier in the Confederate army! I fought for the South under Stonewall Jackson."

You may rest assured I was not slow in extending to him my hand, and expressing grate-tude in all the language I could at the moment command.

The priest stood by in astonishment, not understanding the remarkable demonstration.

"A great man!—a great man!—Stonewall Jackson was!" continued the soldier, while a shade of the deepest sadness settled over his countenance, and he touched his hat and passed on.

IMPRISONED IN A BOILER.—A somewhat extraordinary and very alarming accident occurred recently at the steam printing office of Messrs. Norman, at Cheltenham, Canada.
The engine boiler is a powerful Cornish one, of Tuxford's make, there being two fireholds in parallel tubes passing through the middle of the cylinder. At the time of the accident the boiler was being cleaned, and two persons, a man and a boy, were at work inside of it, the man being in the further end of the cylinder, and the boy just inside the man hole.

It is supposed that the lad was about getting out through the man hole, when his foot slipped between the two tubes, and, losing his nerve, his struggle to extricate himself only forced his leg further in, until it became jammed above the knee joint. An effort to pull him out was resisted by the lad, and very soon his leg began to swell. His body being fixed in the aperture of the man-hole almost excluded air from the man at the end of the boiler, and things were looking serious before a couple of surgeons and a gang of smiths from the wagon works could be fetched.

Fears being entertained for the man, the first task was to wrench off the safety valve pipe, and to give him air and pass stimulants to him. The men then applied themselves to the extraction of the lad, and at once tried to free him by forcing wedges in through the man-hole to drive the tubes asunder.

After some time this was found to be impossible, the lad's body leaving little room for the insertion of the wedges, and the tubes bruisings instead of bending, the men then had to face the task of loosening one of the tubes from the boiler plate; and as they were fastened together by counter-sunk rivets, the task was a formidable one and two or three hours before it could be effected. The lad had fainted several times, and it was with difficulty life could be kept in him. Both are now suffering from the shock and from the bruises which the jarring of boiler occasioned.

THE MYSTERIES OF CREAM.—The microscope is certainly an invaluable aid to science, but its revelations at times are not of the most pleasant character. A French medical gentleman reports some very curious facts in relation to milk, which will, perhaps, account for some of the gastric difficulties which so frequently affect children, whose diet is of the lactical or der. The writer states that if the surface of fresh cream be examined under the microscope there will be found among the myriads of milky and fatty globules a large number of either round or oblong corpuscles, sometimes accompanied with finely dotted matter, being just what is seen in substances in a state of decay. He finds that these disagreeable looking corpuscles make their appearance within five or twenty hours after milking, and in winter after the lapse of two or three days. Continuing his observations until coagulation took place, the corpuscles were found to increase in number, and form, ramified chains, and at length transform themselves into mushrooms, or filaments composed of cells placed end to end in simple series, and supported at their ends with a spherical knob filled with granular matter. An American journal remarks that these facts may be disagreeable to country folks, whose misfortune it is to get pure milk and cream, but as to city people, the artificial character of the compound they use for these articles effectually forbids the idea that they contain any of the unpleasant ingredients mentioned by the French physician.
